55-Day Drill Down

The number of bills available for lawmakers to consider shrinks this week. House Rule 10.18 says that after the 55th day, the House can no longer take up bills on second reading, meaning any House bill that will get a vote must already have been rolled over to third reading. Much of the final week of session will be taken up with bills that have already passed one chamber or the other and are in messages or are bouncing back and forth between the chambers as they pass amendments. Any amendments made must be signed off on by the other chamber. The last two days of the session the House may only consider returning messages, conference reports and concurrent resolutions.
