Declaring Hurricane Preparedness Week in Martin County, Florida

Whereas, the 2022 Hurricane Season begins on June 1, and as a coastal county, Martin County is extremely vulnerable to storm surge, tornadoes, flooding and high winds resulting in severe property damage and the potential for loss of life from the effects of a hurricane; and

Whereas, whether hurricane forecasters have predicted an average, above-average or below-average season, it takes only one storm to have a bad year; and

Whereas, hurricanes Dorian in 2019, Irma in 2017 and Matthew in 2016 directly impacted Martin County and our residents; and

Whereas, population increases and the transiency of Florida residents and visitors have resulted in a percentage of the public not being fully aware of the dangers of hurricanes; and

Whereas, the Martin County Board of County Commissioners is dedicated to mitigating the effects of hurricanes and tropical storms by informing the public of preparedness actions.

Now, therefore, be it proclaimed by the Martin County Board of County Commissioners that May 1-7, 2022 is Hurricane Preparedness Week in Martin County, Florida. Further, the Board urges the cooperation of municipalities, businesses, homeowners and condominium associations, hotel associations and all media in their efforts to inform residents and visitors of appropriate awareness, preparedness and safety measures related to Hurricane Season.
